Originally from New Jersey, with transformative stops in Chicago and Austin, singer-songwriter Jim Heald stretches the boundaries of Folk and Folk Rock from jazz-inflected folk to Roots, Contemporary and Psychedelic. He honed his guitar skills at the Old Town School of Folk Music in Chicago and was a two time finalist at the Kerrville Folk Festival New Folk Competition. Jim plays at DC area folk clubs, wineries, coffeehouses and festivals.

Influenced by artists like The Beatles, the Byrds, Bruce Cockburn, and Richard Thompson, Jim has created an evocative landscape for a soulful musical journey. He also has a strong kinship with other contemporary artists like Ray LaMontagne, David Gray, and The Head and the Heart.

Based on the success of last year's CD, Chiaroscuro, we've decided to re-release Jim's debut CD, Wings of Time. Originally released in 1997 with a lot of help from Austin friends like Rich Brotherton, Eric Blakely, Leeann Atherton, Greg Gosdin, and Susan Hollis, these classic songs will touch your heart and stick to your bones.

"This is how acoustic psychedelic folk is supposed to sound, be it 2015 or 1967." -David Hintz
